GNSO

Milton Mueller (Ph.D., University of Pennsylvania, 1989) is Professor at Syracuse University School of Information Studies, USA. His research focuses on institutions and global governance in communication and information industries. Currently, he is doing research on the relationship between foreign policy, cybersecurity and Internet governance; IP addressing policy, and the security governance practices of ISPs.

His books Ruling the Root: Internet Governance and the Taming of Cyberspace (MIT Press, 2002) and Networks and States: The Global Politics of Internet Governance, (MIT Press 2010) are considered foundational contributions to the literature on Internet governance.

As a co-founder of ICANN's Noncommercial Users Constituency, he has played a leading role in organizing and mobilizing civil society in ICANN, the Internet Governance Forum and OECD. In 2013, Mueller was elected to serve on the Advisory Council of the American Registry for Internet Numbers (ARIN).
